The curriculum for HANDS is based upon evidence-based strategies and practices appropriate and effective for individuals across the lifespan and with a range of neurodevelopmental and behavioral disorders. Information, education and training are provided by an interdisciplinary staff and applicable at the individual, organizational, and community levels of service and training.